Linking with the World, Taiwan is Becoming an Asian Cruise Travel Hub

Taiwan, where sets on tropical, has various of geographic advantages of being a regional cruise hub in Asia and a major maritime transportation hub in the Asia-Pacific region. From north to south and within its offshore islands, many ports under development. These include international commercial ports, domestic commercial ports and fishing ports. From a geographic perspective, Taiwan's ports cover major Northeast Asian routes (Japan, Korea, Mainland China) and Southeast Asian routes (Hong Kong, Macau, Vietnam, Malaysia, the Philippines), possessing advantageous conditions for the development of marine leisure tourism. Taiwan is at the center of this expanding network. As a result, Taiwan is well poised to become one of the primary destinations for cruise tourism in Asia.

Prior to the COVID-19 pandemic, the ports of Keelung and Kaohsiung were home ports for Star Cruises. Planning for cruises through nearby waters has ushered in a new era with novel approaches to island hopping with Taiwan's cruise industry. These include the traditional high seas voyages, as well as expanded routes using Taiwan as a base to Northeast and Southeast Asia. Such cruises would include major players such as Star Cruises, Princess Cruises, Costa Cruises and Royal Caribbean International. Together, these will create a thriving cruise market.

This pamphlet introduces six major ports, namely those in Keelung, Taichung, Anping, Kaohsiung, Hualien and Magong. From these ports, visitors can experience the scenery throughout the main island of Taiwan, as well as Taiwan's offshore islands. The harbors of these different cities evoke different flavors of life. By calling at different locations, and taking part in onshore excursions, you will get to know more about Taiwan's interesting cultures through contact with its tasty foods, historical monuments and local customs.

The Port of Keelung has been completely renovated, from its reception area to its port facilities. It has cruise wharfs at East Bank Wharf No. 2-4 and West Bank Wharf No. 2-4, and has been able to provide berthing for 225,000-tonnage cruise ships since 2018, giving Keelung more potential to develop its cruise business.

The Port of Taichung is positioned as a mid-turn port, with the goal of increasing the turnover rate of cruise ships calling at the port, and integrate the tourism resources of eight counties and cities in Central Taiwan to create a friendly and rich cruise tourism environment. This will focus on developing 1 to 2 hours on-shore itineraries, which will meet the requirements of a 6 to 8 hours cruise ship entry.

In 2021, the Port of Kaohsiung was honored as the first winner of the International Association of Ports and Harbors (IAPH) Award for Resilient Infrastructure on behalf of Taiwanese ports. The passenger-only "Port of Kaohsiung Cruise Terminal" has raised the visibility of Southern Taiwan in the cruise market and attract major cruise ships to call at the Port of Kaohsiung. In addition to welcoming cruise ships of 150,000 to 250,000 tonnage to visit Kaohsiung, it has also introduced a "south-in-south-out" tourism model, and planned a series of thematic tourism itineraries such as the Ilha Formosa Island Fashion Tour, the Meinong Hakka Culture Tour, the Fo Guang Shan Religious Tour, and the Tianliao Moon World Ecology Tour, so that cruise passengers calling at Kaohsiung can enjoy a unique visiting experience.

In response to global maritime market trends, such as larger-tonnage ships, axial routes and the formation of global logistics networks, the Taiwanese government continues to adopt the business model of "internal coordination and division of labor, external consolidation and competition" to strengthen the cooperation within industry supply chains and between ports. These efforts will give full play to Taiwan's function as an important node in the global supply chain, and accelerate the improvement of service and hardware facilities and joint external transportation systems at each port. This will also promote the policies geared toward free trade port areas. In addition, we are striving to create a quality industry business environment and enhance the overall competitiveness of Taiwan's international commercial ports. The port ecosystem as a whole will jointly promote the quality development of ports, so that Taiwan's port cluster can continue to operate steadily and connect Taiwan with the world.

Exploring Taiwan From the Sea to the Land – an Extraordinary Journey

Taiwan is a small island, but its scenery is as diverse as it is refined, with fascinating stories and resonating humanities in every corner of the island. We welcome travelers from all over the world to come to Taiwan, experience the vitality of local life, visit this beautiful island, explore various hidden gems, appreciate the humanities of Taiwan, and be pampered by the hospitality of Taiwan!

Taiwan has been named “Asia’s Best Leisure Destination” by the US travel magazine Global Traveler, “Best in Travel 2022” by the travel authority Lonely Planet, and “Most Inclusive Tourism Destination of the Year” by the Crescent Rating 2022 Awards. Taiwan’s culinary scene offers a collection of delightful delicacies from every corner of the island, and the Michelin Guide Taipei has also awarded stars to restaurants and eateries in Taipei, Taichung, Tainan, and Kaohsiung, providing foodies with many choices. The natural scenery, unique culture, living style and technological prowess are important elements that attract international visitors to Taiwan, and the multi-cultural blend of traditional celebrations and religious culture make Taiwan truly unique.

In terms of recommended themed tours, Taiwan offers accessibility-friendly tourism, Muslim-friendly environment, green eco-tourism, marine tourism, mountain tourism, bicycle tourism, railway tourism, and hot spring tourism, all of which have been popular tourist themes in the past 10 years. With distinctive tourism elements throughout the four seasons, a variety of tourist desires are interwoven. After disembarking from a port, international travelers can not only choose taxis, but also connect with railways (Taiwan High Speed Rail, Taiwan Railways) to start their travel experiences.

Beginning in 2022, Taiwan continues to promote four major tourism themes: ecology (mountain, sea, geology, flower, bird, and butterfly watching), culture (folk festivals, tribes, Hakka communities, museums, small towns), food (hot spring cuisine, Michelin, food fairs, night markets), and LOHAS (cycling, marathons, railways, green trails, and hot springs), and combine them with the seasons: Spring – Taiwan Lantern Festival, Summer – Taiwan Midsummer Travel Festival, Fall – Taiwan Bicycle Travel Festival, and Winter – Taiwan Good Hot Springs Festival, thus attracting domestic and foreign tourists to visit Taiwan in all seasons.

Food is always the best way to start with getting to know a place. In Taiwan, the high density of snack bars and restaurants filled with everyday life, visitors can easily discover styles of cuisine and experience them. In addition to Taiwan’s local cuisine, such as night market snacks, visitors can also sample items such as Hakka cuisine, military dependents’ village cuisine, Jiangsu and Zhejiang dim sum, and Michelin cuisine. Whether you prefer noodles, rice dishes or international food, Taiwan offers everything, including French, American, and Japanese cuisine. These all delight the taste buds as well as provide a visual sensation. With a wide range of food, Taiwan is really a foodie's paradise with a concentration of cuisines from all over the world. In terms of beverages, internationally acclaimed Taiwan tea, boba milk tea, and high mountain coffee have also become the focus of international attention in recent years. Welcome to Ilha Formosa! Don't forget to purchase a local souvenir too! Welcome to friendly, smart, and authentic Taiwan!

PORT OF KEELUNG

The Port of Keelung is the busiest of Taiwan's cruise ports and its most important cruise home port. It is conveniently located in the urban downtown and has a convenient public transportation system. Its proximity to the capital city of Taipei and scenic spots on the North Coast make it a popular destination for international cruise passengers.

Currently, the Port of Keelung has cruise wharfs at East Bank Wharf No. 2-4 and West Bank Wharf No. 2-4, and has been able to provide berthing for 225,000-tonnage cruise ships since 2018. The port has a geographical advantage in terms of its proximity to the Greater Taipei area, which has attracted cruise lines such as Star Cruises, Princess, Costa and Royal Caribbean to establish a foothold in the port. With an average of five cruises departing from Keelung each week during the peak season, its many cruise travel options can meet the diverse needs of passengers, indicating that the cruise industry in Keelung is on the verge of booming growth.

PORT OF TAICHUNG

The Port of Taichung is a man-made port with a vast space for further development and convenient access, surrounded by a holiday fish market, an aquatic products sales area, hotels, the Outlet Park shopping mall, an old street, and an art center. The area offers a variety of dried and fresh fish and snacks, combined with the surrounding coastal waterfront recreational facilities, which is envisaged to be developed into a "Coastal Line Tourism Hotspot." The Port of Taichung is also being developed into a key wind power center and international green energy benchmark port. The Port of Taichung has attracted the investment of Japanese real estate company Mitsui to develop 18 hectares of land in the Port of Taichung area to build the Mitsui Outlet Park, which will be developed together with waterfront recreational facilities on the surrounding coast into a "Coastal Line Tourism Hotspot."

The Port of Taichung is very near an offshore wind farm and has excellent port infrastructure, waterways, wharfs and hinterland to meet the special operational needs of wind turbine manufacturing and assembly. In order to meet the energy policy of offshore wind power generation, the Port of Taichung has commenced the construction of the #5A and #5B heavy parts wharf, and at the same time, has renovated the #2 wharf and built the #106 heavy parts wharf for wind turbine assembly, and provided 80 hectares of land and constructed roads and other related public facilities to serve as a special zone for the domestic wind turbine parts industry, so as to attract domestic and foreign offshore wind power related industries to move in and drive the development of a domestic related equipment and parts supply chain.

Food & Souvenirs

When you visit the Port of Taichung, you can't miss the delicious and affordable fresh seafood. Head to the tourist fishing harbor or seafood restaurants to enjoy sashimi, stir-fried dishes, seafood fry, and so on. There are also many high-end hot pot restaurants, barbecue restaurants, and Michelin-starred restaurants in Taichung, presenting a wide variety of quality choices. And if you want to get down to earth, you can enjoy delicious military-dependents' village themed food, handmade noodles, and private chef's cuisine with signature sauce, which is particularly appetizing. We particularly recommend sun cakes, lemon cakes, almond thins, pineapple cakes, cheesecakes, mullet roe bites and fish crisps.

Recommended food

Beef Noodle Soup

Beef noodle soup are an enduring favorite among noodle dishes, whether stewed or braised, Szechuan or spicy flavor. Beef noodle soup may look humble, but it is a challenge for the chef to make a rich and layered soup, and to stew the meat to tender perfection.

Military-dependents' Village Cuisine

The Military-Dependents' Village Cuisine has always been the most nostalgic taste of home for those studying or working in other places, with simple, handmade and spongy noodles, braised vegetables, dumplings or stewed soup dishes, all of which are deeply satisfying!

Hakka Rice-based Food

Located near Sanyi Interchange, come and try Hakka rice snacks. The "Jiu Ding Xuan" is located on Sanyi Wood Sculpture Street. It sells all types of Hakka rice snacks, flower/fruit tea, red bean rice cake, Hakka vegetable buns, and tangyuan, all of which are bestsellers!

Sun Cake

Sun cake, with its crispy and multi-layered crust and sweet and smooth filling, epitomizes Taichung's culinary diplomacy. Besides the original cream flavor, other flavors such as honey, brown sugar, and strawberry are also offered.

Mullet Roe Bites

Mullet roe bites have made the list as one of Taichung's top ten recommended souvenirs. Sliced wild mullet roe can be paired with baked apple slices. The aroma lingers, making the taste more layered.

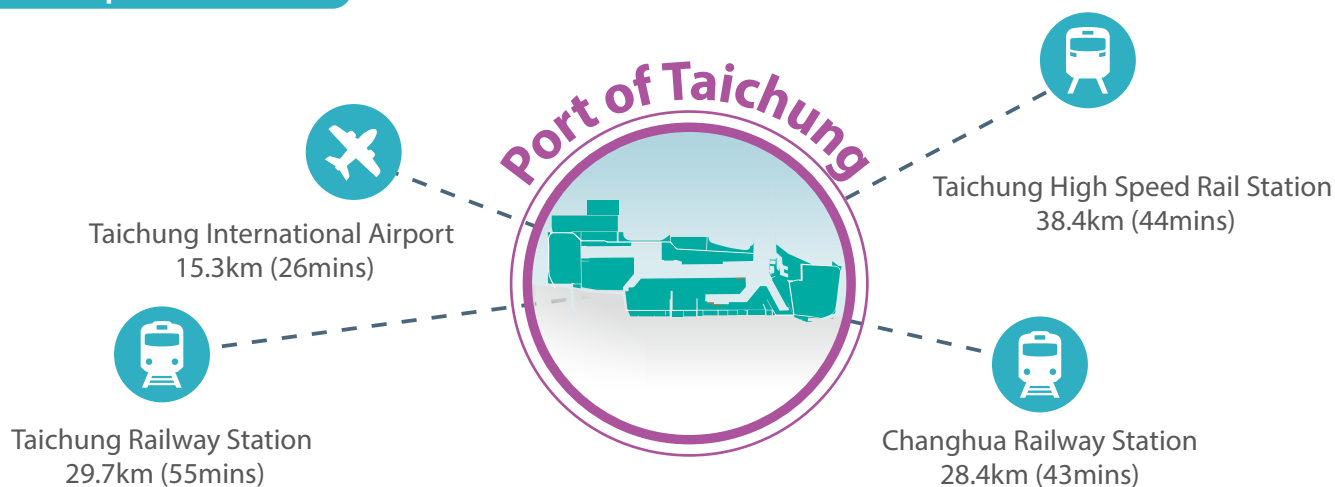

Fish Floss & Fish Crisp

When you come to the harbor, fish crisps, fish floss, fish balls and similar items are a must-eat! Founded in 1950, Maru Wen Foods has a long history and has earned many accolades, including being named as one of Taiwan's top 100 souvenirs, and one of Taichung City's 2022 Top 10 souvenirs.

PORT OF ANPING

Located in the southern part of Taiwan, the Port of Anping is one of the most historical settlements in Taiwan. The surrounding scenic spots include Chikan Tower, Anping Old Street, Anping Old Fort (Fort Zeelandia), Tainan Confucius Temple and Chimei Museum. The city is rich in cultural heritage, local cuisine and national natural resources. At present, Wharfs 1-4 are available for medium-sized cruise ships to berth, and the leisurely urban pace provides an authentic local experience for cruise passengers.

The Port of Anping was the gateway to Tainan and became the largest harbor in Taiwan at that time. Because of its calm and stable waters, it is suitable for developing into a yachting industry area. The surrounding area is adjacent to Anping Fishing Port, the Port of Anping Historic Landscape Park, Anping Old Street, Anping Fisherman's Wharf. It's connected to Yuguang Island by the Yuguang Bridge, forming a complete tourist and recreational zone, as well as large yacht marinas, yacht clubs, leisure clubs, and resort hotels, all of which will lead to industry development and create overall prosperity for the area.

The Anping Tree house was originally a warehouse for a foreign merchant firm. The building was expanded during the Japanese colonial era, and was then abandoned for half a century. This allowed banyan trees to grow, thus creating a unique symbiosis of house and tree to form "trees take walls as trunks and houses take leaves as tiles."

Food & Souvenirs

Tainan is often hailed as the food capital of Taiwan, and it's famous for classic snacks, such as danzai noodles, rice bowl cake, Nabeyaki egg noodles, shrimp rolls, beef soup, milkfish dishes, eel dishes, desserts such as candied fruit, douhua and ice cream. It also offers Trendy hipster Coffee shops .You can also enjoy “must-try” fish skin congee (noted in the MICHELIN guide) and traditional shaved ice at very reasonable prices. For souvenir gifts, don't miss out on pudding, shrimp cakes, handmade egg rolls, peanut candies, egg pancakes and other items.

Recommended food

Danzai Noodles

Danzai noodles are quite simple. Consisting of a slice of blanched meat, a braised egg, a boiled shrimp and some dried meat topping, it's really the best nighttime snack for Tainaners! It was even recommended by Bib Gourmand for Tainan in 2022!

Beef Soup

What is a must-eat in Tainan? “Beef soup” is surely on the top of the list. The stalls open for business before daybreak, and the store closes when it is sold out. Add some white rice and turn it into “rice in soup.” This is a secret technique that proves you're a true foodie!

Salty Congee

Tainaners love to have a sumptuous breakfast, such as warm savory congee with premium ingredients like oysters, milkfish, a little chopped cilantro, and fried shallot crisp. It's perfect eaten alone or with fried bread stick.

Eel Cuisine

Eel cuisine is unique in Tainan, whether it's soup or stir-fry, it's all very popular! The fatty wild eel is stir-fried to bring out unrivalled freshness, and the crunchy texture mixed with noodles offers a great taste that lingers.

Pancakes

Don't miss out on trying the handmade pancakes, an enduring classic snack of Tainan. The vintage ovens have been baking pancakes for years in the well-hidden alleyways of Tainan. Purely handmade, each piece varies in color, aroma, shape, and hardness.

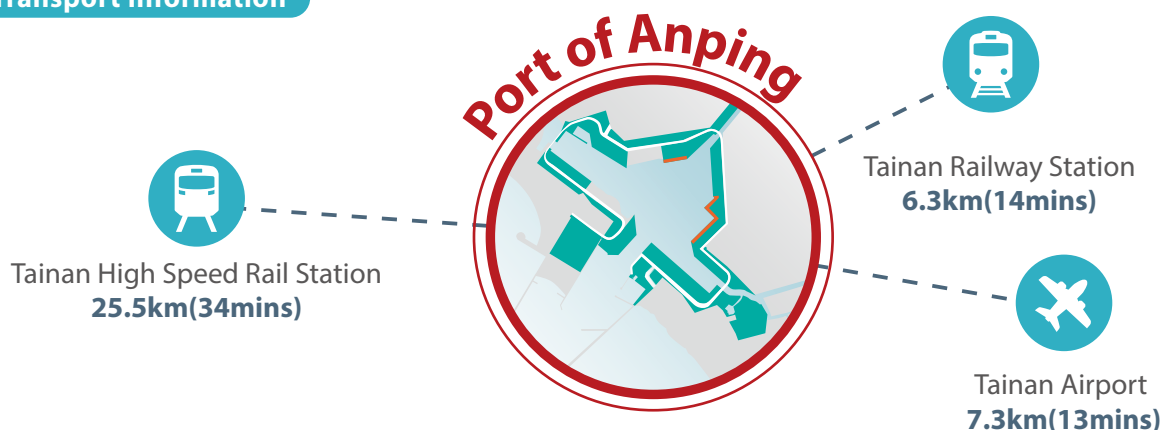

Pudding

How can a seemingly simple pudding win over the picky eaters of Southern Taiwan? The tender bouncy appearance and the rich and delicate taste, along with the moist caramel sauce and slightly bitter caramel aroma, seem to be addictive!

PORT OF KAOHSIUNG

Situated at the southern tip of Taiwan, Kaohsiung was formerly known as the “Port of Takow.” It’s the largest international cruise port in southern Taiwan. Surrounding attractions include the Great Harbor Bridge, Kaohsiung Port Warehouse No.2, Kaohsiung Port Oceanfront Garden, Kaohsiung Port Museum, the Pier 2 Art Center, and the Hamasen Museum of Taiwan Railway. Cruise ships call at Pier 8-10 and Pier 17-21, which provides passengers with comprehensive customs clearance facilities and services.

The Port of Kaohsiung has an area of 17,736 hectares, of which about 10% is land and 90% is water. In addition to welcoming cruise ships, the port also has areas geared toward cargo handling, fishing, a shipyard and facilities operated by TaiPower and CPC Taiwan.

The Port of Kaohsiung is the largest international port in Taiwan, and the 18th(2022) largest container port in the world. The port area is vast, the hinterland is wide, the climate is warm, and there is a narrow sandbar along the waterfront. The geographical conditions are excellent, and the port is naturally formed. Furthermore, plans are underway to make the Port of Kaohsiung into a major marine cargo transit center in the Asia-Pacific region. Come enjoy the scenery of the Port of Kaohsiung. Take a harbor cruise on a sightseeing boat and enjoy the city views.

Food & Souvenirs

Food prices are affordable near the Port of Kaohsiung, and a wide variety of snack options are offered. One can explore popular eats in the nearby streets, including milkfish rice noodle soup, plain sugar cakes, meat dumplings in omelets, Lao Chiang black tea with milk, duck rice, beef shabu-shabu, rice cake, and soup noodles. These are all highly recommended for visitors. Furthermore, Kaohsiung's Military Dependents' Village cuisine is also a favorite for foodies. Don't miss out on tasty dishes in Zuoying District, many of which come recommended by Bib Gourmand. For souvenirs, great choices would include Kaohsiung Cake, peanut malt candy, Mulun peanut candy, Batung honey castella, and banana cake. All of these can be purchased for reasonable prices.

Recommended food

Lamb Dishes

Tender fresh lamb is served in a herbal Danggui soup with a variety of lamb stir-fries, as well as whole lamb dishes such as lamb liver, lamb feet, and lamb chops.

Duck Rice

The rich gravy mixed with duck oil, drizzled with sauce can be eaten alone or cut into sliced duck, or diced duck pieces with rice. These are a great treat!

Beef Shabu-shabu

The restaurant insists on not freezing the beef and not keeping it overnight before serving it to patrons. After dipping the meat for three to five seconds in a hot nutritious soup stock, the original nutritional value and taste are preserved.

Kaohsiung Cake

In Kaohsiung, you can't miss the exquisite pastry gift sets of "Kaohsiung Cake," which is a fusion of traditional craftsmanship and modern creativity passed down from generation to generation since the early period in Taiwan when Kaohsiung was still called Takow.

Banana Cake

The adorable yellow banana-shaped cute cake has become a creative hit, as well as one of Kaohsiung's popular souvenirs. The outer layer is dense and soft, the inner filling is delicate and smooth.

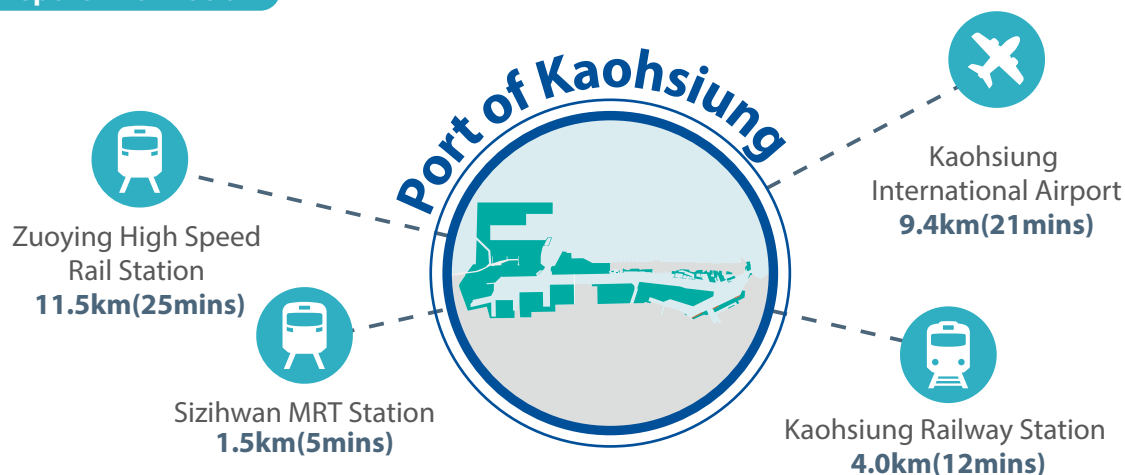

White Sugar Sponge Cake

This cake has a crispy texture on the outside and a dense, tender fried glutinous rice filling inside. It is then sprinkled with fine sugar frosting for a treat that is not too greasy, making it one of Kaohsiung's most popular street snacks.

Food & Souvenirs

Many people find Hualien irresistible and hard to leave. The classic snacks will delight your taste buds, such as buns, wontons, fried scallion cakes, and the black tea at Miaokou, all of which are very affordable! For souvenirs, choose peeled chili peppers, honey black tea, handmade mochi, Wuhe coffee, cheesecake, sponge cake, and cream puff pastry. For those who love art, marble carvings, aboriginal weaving, tribal carvings, and bark woven bags are all special and unique items.

Recommended food

Wontons

A salty pork stuffing is paired with springy wonton skin, and the full-bodied wontons are topped with pork bone broth and scallion crisp served with an overflowing aroma. It's fresh and delicious!

Fried Scallion Pancake

The gleaming, hand-rolled crust is deep-fried to a golden perfection, then topped with eggs. The mixture of egg and cake aroma, color and flavor, plus chili sauce is simply addictive.

Peeled Chili Peppers

For those who love spicy food, you must try peeled chili peppers when you come to Hualien! They are made with local Hualien chili peppers, which are spicy and an excellent accompaniment for meals. Many people will add peeled chili peppers to chicken soup to make the soup more flavorful.

Mochi

The white and chubby skin has a variety of flavors such as peanuts, sesame seeds, and red beans. Take a bite and feel the spread of bliss. Having a bad mood? Let's have a Hualien mochi!

Honey Black Tea

Taiwan is famous for its oolong tea, Pouchong tea, Oriental Beauty tea and black tea, but Hualien's honey black tea stands out on its own. The clean and fresh air from the central mountain range, surrounded by fog throughout the year, cultivates excellent tea!

Tribal Carvings

Not only is the scenery in Hualien beautiful, but the handicrafts of the friendly indigenous peoples are exquisite. The various hand-woven and carved artworks are full of creative ingenuity and warmth, but also practicality.

MAGONG PIER DISTRICT AT PORT OF PENGHU

Magong Pier District at port of Penghu is a natural harbor with gentle winds and waves, and is the main gateway to the Penghu Islands for cargo transport by sea. The island is rich in marine and cultural resources and has once been named as the most beautiful bay in the world. The seemingly endless white sandy beaches and the stunning island scenery have been favored by international travelers, making it an emerging destination for international cruise ships visiting Taiwan in recent years.

Magong Pier District at port of Penghu is located in the outlying islands of south-west Taiwan, and is a port with two dock areas. The port area consists of the Magong Terminal and the Longmen Jianshan Terminal. In order to maximize the benefits of the port as a whole, the Magong Terminal is mainly used for passenger transportation, while the Longmen Jianshan Terminal is mainly used for cargo transportation. Magong Terminal is located in a horseshoe-shaped natural bay adjacent to Magong City, and is the primary gateway to the Penghu Islands for external maritime traffic and passenger transportation. The port focuses on the development of international cruise ships, cross-strait mini Three-Link Transportation and external passenger transportation to Penghu, as well as sightseeing and water recreation. The Penghu area is rich in tourism resources, so the Magong terminal area is mainly developed for tourism. In order to develop the international cruise market, plans are underway to build the Jinlongtou Cruise Terminal and other port facilities to provide berthing for large cruise ships.

Food & Souvenirs

When you come to Penghu, the must-eat affordable dishes on the island include beef noodles, clay oven rolls, roast pork rice, beef offal soup, cactus ice, and tri-color squid balls. Those who love seafood should not miss items such as a seafood BBQ, Charcoal Grill at Ocean Farm, neritic squid, and all-you-can-eat oysters. Great souvenir ideas include brown sugar cake, savory cake, seafood sauce, and shell decorations. The ambience of the island and the sunshine seem to cast a magical spell on the cruise experience.

Recommended food

Cactus Ice

When you come to Penghu, you will hear about the three treasures of Penghu: cactus, Fong Ru tea, and aloe vera, among which the sweet and sour cactus smoothie is cool and refreshing.

Seafood BBQ

The aroma of BBQs wafts in the air as you walk down the street, and you can savor fresh oysters, seafood, squid, crabs, shrimp, neritic squid, clams and other fresh seafood at a discounted price.

Brown Sugar Cake

When one thinks of Penghu, brown sugar cakes must spring to mind. The technique is inherited from the Japanese Ryukyu brown sugar cake making method, which is a traditional steaming method of making cake that results in just the right amount of firmness.

Salty Cakes

Salty cake is the savoriest delight! The recipe has been handed down from the Qing Dynasty to the present day. It has a crunchy texture and combines sweet, salty, spicy and tangy flavors, making it perfect for afternoon tea.

Seafood Sauce and Scallop Sauce

Seafood sauce is one of the standard souvenirs of Penghu. Penghu's famous sauces are seafood sauce, XO sauce, neritic squid sauce and flying fish roe sauce, which are suitable for mixing with rice, noodles or cooking.

Hand-made noodles

Handmade noodles, which are rich in the taste of Penghu's sunshine, are made by hand, and the taste is completely different from that of machine-made noodles. The scene of sun-drying noodles is a beautiful scene captured by the photographer's lens.
